All Bombs Boom The Same

There is no comfort in knowing the Chinese People's Republic cannot explode its first atomic bomb without U.S. detection.

There has been no comfort in knowing that every nuclear blast set off by the Soviet Union has been detected by the United States.

In all truth, now that we have reached this point in the nuclear era, we don't worry because something we don't know might kill us by accident but because what we do know may kill us by worry.

All bombs will boom the same on doomsday, if it comes. It won't matter what nation's trademark is on them. To day, there are U.S. bombs, British bombs, French bombs. Tomorrow, there will be Red Chinese bombs.

EVENTUALLY, every country that wants to be taken seriously will have nuclear blasting capacity. The United Arab Republic is spurring on its German bomb experts. Israel is spurring on its experts.

Who wants to bet the ingenious Japanese won't have the best bomb for the least money?

Or that the indefatigable Germans won't apply their scientific minds singlemindedly to this prime requisite of keeping up with the international Joneses?

And who wants to bet that one day some genius who has been working in obscurity won't find a way to put together a nuclear weapons system for peanuts and amass a fortune selling it to little countries that wouldn't hesitate to indulge in the same nuclear blackmail the big ones engage in?

AS TO ABILITY "to deliver the bomb," as they say in military parlance, it might be flown in by some simple little plane that wouldn't even excite suspicion. It might be carried in as a piece of luggage, floated in on a ship, or lobbed

Eventually, everybody who wants a nuclear bomb will have one and everybody will have a delivery system. The Chinese People's Republic is reported to be next in line for admission to what one day will be as exclusive as a Washington key

The news is frightening because Chinese Marxism is frightening. But when Chinese Marxists finally realize what The Bomb means, they too will understand why all bombs will boom the same on Doomsday-the ones they intend to drop on someone else and the ones someone else intends to drop on them.

The Other Shot That Missed

Readers of the Warren Commission report on the Kennedy assassination will be fascinated by the meticulous detail of the document.

Though not written with a view to popular treatment of crime, the report makes Ian Fleming's long background passages in the adventures of his fictional James Bond read like casual sketches.

One result of this attention to small detail is going to be a curiosity about another shot Lee Harvey Oswald fired with lethal intent-the shot that missed Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker on April 10, IDENTITY of the would-be assassin never was known until the next December when Oswald's wife told of her husband's plot to kill Gen. Walker-how he had written the plot in a notebook, which he later destroyed, how he had returned after the plot's failure and confessed to her and how she reacted in deep anger. lecturing him and keeping the notebook for a time as evidence to use against him If he ever tried to kill anyone else.

If Oswald's shot at Gen. Walker had not missed on the night of April 10, 1963, the Dallas police would have been under tremendous pressure to find two men. Had they found Oswald, would they have found an accomplice?

One night this month rain and wind will combine to strip the trees of their summer leaves.

The next morning the landscape will have been transformed from soft to stark. The color scheme will have changed from polychromatic to monochromatic. The world will be a study in black and white, blending into gray.

The temperature won't be as low as it was last February in New Hampshire, when the campaigners for the top spot in U.S. politics began their ordeal in the snow. The big freeze will come later, in November, when the votes have been cast, the losers have congratulated the winners and campaign posters are flapping soddenly in the sighing winds of the melancholy days, saddest of the year.

Or to put it succinctly, October is the home stretch of another national campaign. All points of no return now have been passed. What is to be is going to be

Alas, it's springtime in Antarctica. The temperature has soared to zero, instead of lingering at 100-plus below. Winds have moderated from their 100 mph velocity and once more the sun glints off the ice cap. Ah, vernal ecstasy!

I can remember - dimly - when skirts were short in the flapper era, but this is ridiculous, girls. Skirts are getting shorter than they finally got in London, where they finally got so short they couldn't get any shorter.

The Warren Commission should have read its own report describing preparations to give President Kennedy "maximum exposure" in Dallas. It's not the Secret Service that needs reform. It's the politicians, who want "maximum exposure," even if it means being a target for a madman with a gun.

This up-to-the-minute political story really begins exactly 100 years ago. Back in 1864 the bearded Karl Marx launched the Socialist

Second International. Decades later the Leninists launched the Third International, the Trotskyites unleashed the Fourth International and Victor Riesel now Mao Tse-tung, tugging with Nikita Khrushchev, is reportedly ready to create the Fifth International.

In the U.S., knowledge of the Second International is esoteric. Those who remember a mention of it in a college class think it dead. Far from it.

The Second International is alive. It is vibrant. Except in this country, it is contending for power all across the free world -especially in the British election, which is generally being overlooked because of the tensions of our own presidential

HOWEVER, the results of the British poll could affect us almost as much as the outcome in the U.S. on Nov. 3.

The race in the United Kingdom is between a Socialist party - the British Labor party -and a middle-of-the-road capitalist party-the Conservatives.

Because Labor leader Harold Wilson may find himself prime minister of the British Empire within a few weeks and because he has been acting chairman of the Socialist International, I sought out its headquarters in London recently.

I found it on the second floor of an apartment house, walk-up type, in St. John's Wood, High St., in a quiet part of London.

THE FEW ROOMS had been converted into small offices and a slender, graying, fiftyish general secretary by the name of Albert Carthy presided over it, modestly apologizing for some of the disarray on his desk.

Modestly, I say, because the Socialist International now has 11,834,680 members as of the latest count. When its world congress meets a year from now it will have millions more in its 42 affiliated parties. More than half of the Socialist their leader, West Berlin's Mayor Willie Brandt, as chancellor of the German Republic Wilson has already predicted a Socialist-led Europe sometime in 1965. Such a Socialist continent will "establish new patterns of relations with the U.S.," according to the British Labor party leader.

He has said that "Europe is on the event of a great social breakthrough." He bases this not only on the chances of his own election and that of Herr Brandt, but also on the fact that Italian Socialist party leader Pietro Nenni is vice premier of Italy and French Socialist party leader Guy Mollett has a considerable chance of succeeding the aging Charles deGaulle.

AS WILSON SEES IT, most of Europe, including the Scandinavian nations, of course, would then be under Socialist party leadership. There would be no need to create any new Socialist councils.

The Second Inter there. Its leaders, such as the famed Paul-Henri Spaak, who once ran NATO, and Wilson and Brandt, meet regularly.

There is also a council which acts as the governing body of the Socialist International. It met in Brussels on Sept. 2.

Thus, if Mr. Wilson's dream comes true, America will face three world blocs, the Soviet Communists, Mao's Communists and the non-Communist Socialists. That should keep the world spinning.

strations and riots. The Harris poll takes note of the rise in the fears of the public concerning crime. A question was asked as to whether, compared to a year ago, the citizen feels "more worried, less worried or not much different' about his or her personal safety on the streets.

The poll in August showed 53 per cent as "more worried." This figure has risen in September to 61 per cent.

WHILE THE SAME poll shows most Americans support the "civil rights bill by two to one and President Johnson is not blamed for the current situation, political history shows that where there is discontent it usually is taken out on the national administration in the subsequent election.

This is one reason the extent the reaction of the voters to of the protest vote is today the unknown factor that confronts not only pollsters but all those who attempt the role of prophet with respect to the outcome of the current election.

Certainly what appears to be the situation in September is not always borne out by the state of the public mind in the last week of October and the first few days of November in a presidential-election year.

Oswald Like Wild Russian

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON Sergi Nechayev was the wildest of the wild Russian revolutionists of the 19th century. He was ruthless and he had a simple philosophy: assassination.

He was a liar. He used fictitious names. He was a killer. And he so badly wanted recognition as a hero, leader and martyr, all at the same time, that he cooked up fantasies about himself.

Lee Harvey Oswald was the same and did the same. Nechayev, like Oswald, had a bleak childhood. Both had halfbaked intellects.

This is an example of how farout Nechayev was: when he escaped the czarist police and went to Switzerland, he represented himself as an agent of an organization which didn't exist.

Then, returning to Russia under an assumed name, he represented himself as a disciple of Sergei Nechayev who, he said, had died in a czarist prison, tortured to death for the revolution.

Lenin seems to have learned some lessons from Nechavev, if only in ruthlessness. Perhaps Oswald did, too, if he ever read Nechayev's life although at this moment it can't be said he ever heard of the nutty Russian.

The Warren Commission. which investigated Oswald's assassination of President John F. Kennedy, in the first of its many-volume report on the tragedy paid scant attention to the books Oswald read, books which may have influenced him.

It will give more details in some of the subsequent volumes, some or all of which may be released this month. It could never hope to list all the books he ever read, if only because he didn't keep records and was secretive.

And just because he was secretive, communicating little to anyone, it's doubtful the commission could ever hope to pinpoint many, if any, influences on Oswald from his reading. He probably didn't know himself.

There is no life of Nechavey listed among the books Oswald borrowed from the New Orleans library, when he lived in that city. There is no public record available on what books he read in Dallas.

He was quoted as saying he read about communism from the time he was 15 years old although when asked at 20 to name some of his Communist reading he could mention only one: "Das Kapital" by Karl Marx. He could easily have read the Nechayev story, though, in a couple of paperback books: one, "To the Finland Station," by Edmund Wilson; and the other, Apostles of Revolution," by Max Nomad. He must have had assassination on his mind for some time before he shot the President, for on April 10, 1963, he tried to kill former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker with a rifle and a few days later went to New Orleans.

He stayed there until September, borrowing from the library while he was there a book on the assassination of Sen. Huey Long in 1935. Two months later he shot the President.

liam Van Valkenburg, 230 Moore left. St., who were named in affidavits signed by Gail Huffman of the Washington School Rd., near New Cumberland.

Both defendants pleaded not guilty at arraignment Monday and the case was continued until today to allow the complaining witness to summon witnesses. Asst. Solicitor Richard J. Clark advised the judge the three appeared, but all said they knew nothing about the alleged incident. None was called to tes-

Huffman testified today he was in the Green Mill minding my own business" when the two attacked him without provocation. He said no words were exchanged. He added that he did not know the two men.

Huffman alleged Van Valkenburg struck him, but he said he knew nothing after the first blow. He said he did not know if Crawford had struck him. In fact, he said, he did not know if Crawford was present.

He said he filed the charges against Crawford on information furnished him by witnesses.

Immediately after Huffman failed to identify Crawford, the court dismissed the charge against the Wellsville man. The charge against Van Valkenburg was dismissed at the close of the hearing.

"As far as the court is con-Man Honored cerned, this was a drunken brawl," the judge said. The story of the complaining witness does not impress the court suf-

Patrolman Jerry F. Adkins, president of Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 29, left, is shown presenting Lt. Boso with a plaque from the lodge honoring him for his service. Chief A. J. Radeschi made presentation of the badge, engraved with the officer's name, the date of his appointment and the date of his retirement.

He praised Lt. Boso for "30 years of honest and faithful service to the police department and the community."

The principal speaker was Municipal Judge Samuel M. Chertoff, who traced Lt. Boso's career and discussed the growing law enforcement problem in America. Frank A. Dawson, a friend of the of-

Junior Editors Quiz on THE BIBLE

QUESTION: Where did King Solomon get all his gold?

ANSWER: In the Bible, 1st Kings, chapter 6, the story is told of how King Solomon started to build the Temple of Jehovah. He wanted it to be a monument to the one true God and to be more magnificent than any heathen temple. He believed that the lavish use of gold was one way to express this idea. The enormous amount of gold and silver ised by King Solomon has been estimated, in our modern aluation, at about 4 billion dollars.

From the earliest times, men had valued gold above other metals. Many sources of gold were discovered in or near the lands spoken of in the Old Testament. Gold was traded for and brought to the Jewish capital of Jerusalem from India, South Arabia and Ethiopia. Our illustration of the green of the country of Shahour the green of the country of the green of the country of the green of the country of the green of the gr tion shows the queen of the country of Sheba, which was in southwestern Arabia, coming to pay a visit to King Solomon and bringing him many valuable presents, including gold worth nearly 3½ million dollars. This queen had heard of the glory of King Solomon and had come to see for herself.

FOR YOU TO DO: Read chapter 10 of 1st Kings in the Bible and you will find a detailed report on King Solomon and the visiting Queen of Sheba.

Bruce Heggen of Rothsay, Minn., wins today's com-bined prize of Compton's Illustrated Science Dictionary plus $10 cash, for this question. Mail yours on a postcard to Junior Editors in care of The Review and you may win the weekly grand prize of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia.
